

Tim in KY TdF Stage 13 is a 11-kilometer ITT in the Pyrenees from Loudenvielle to the Altiport at Peyragudes.

Tim in KY The altitude gain over the 11 kilometers is 635 meters. The final kilometer up the Altiport runway is at a constant 13%. Overall, the climb averages 8%.

07-17-2025
02:21:29 pm

Tim in KY The Lanterne Rouge starts at 13:10, Pog at 17:05. It is imagined that it will take 26 minutes to complete the course. Forecast is for sunshine in the low-20s.

07-17-2025
02:22:03 pm

Tim in KY No DNF or OTL on stage 12, but Bryan Coquard came withing 5 minutes of the latter. Given his hand injury on Thursday, a DNS would not be a surprise. Three team cars, Jayco, RBH and Total, were fined 500CHF for not obeying commissaires' instructions. EFE car was fined 500CHF for a sticky bottle and Jordan Geat of Total was fined 200CHF for being pushed excessively. Whatever that means.

BusterSci Thought that was interesting.

07-18-2025
06:22:27 am

BusterSci On a different note, only one person has climbed Hautacam faster than Pog. Bjarne Riis in 1996 was 28 seconds faster.

07-18-2025
06:24:52 am

BusterSci Remco and team are upset with Visma, saying they rode like they were riding for Pog. Perhaps they should be more upset with the way Remco and their own team rode? You can say Visma had bad tactics but that's hardly an excuse for Remco losing time.

07-18-2025
06:34:34 am

Tim in KY No DNS reported so far but still 30 minutes to the Lanterne Rouge.

07-18-2025

Tim in KY Riis was a known dooper. So was probably every successful biker in the 90s and early aughts. 07-18-2025 06:40:10 am

BusterSci Yeah, The same account posted the top times. Almost all from late 90s to mid 00s. And then 9 from this year and 4 from 22. 07-18-2025 06:44:14 am

Tim in KY When was Hautacam first used in le Tour? 07-18-2025 06:49:53 am

BusterSci If I were to place a bet on the top clean rider on that list, not counting the current crop, it would be Pinot at #49. I'd feel good about Bardet at 75, too. Not impugning any of the current riders on the list wither from this year or prior Yeats--I was just considering retired riders. 07-18-2025 06:49:56 am BusterSci There will not be changes in who the top 10 riders are today, but the placings of 2-8 will change. That's my stage prediction. I think it unlikely that Jonas loses 2nd, but if he's demoralized and Remco is on a great day it could happen. The gaps to Gall and Jorgenson are to big for any changes, unless somebody is sick or has a mechanical or crash.

07-18-2025
07:44:20 am

BusterSci I can't speak to what these guys think, but if I were in Jonas's place I'd have a hard time motivating myself. It's clear that Tadej is better and the best I can do is hang around so I'm there when he crashes. If I were in Remco's spot, though, I think I'd be motivated to try to catch Jonas. Vingo's won twice and any other placing is failure. Remco can still improve and catching Jonas would be a big step up.

BusterSci Cripes. Motos coming down the hill almost took out Plapp. That's not acceptable in any way.

07-18-2025
08:07:31 am

BusterSci If we assume Pog wins this year and takes his fifth next year, he'll still be younger than HWSNBN was when he won his first in 1999.

07-18-2025
08:52:36 am

Rocket City Gal I'll send if the top dog is in the US and wants one. Not sure about shipping to other countries. I was in a shirt exchange (one of my ice dye groups does an exchange a few times a year) and they included people from Canada. Of course, I "drew" someone in Canada. Getting something to Canada was a nightmare and it was very expensive. The first shirt went UPS, paid $25 to send it, and it got confiscated by a delivery broker who wanted the recipient or me to pay over $60 in fees/tariffs (for a t shirt!) That one eventually either got destroyed or resold to someone. The second shirt made it after two or three weeks and was more expensive to send. (USPS). It was ridiculous.

07-18-2025
08:54:56 am

BusterSci Yeah. Good pick. I kind of spaced on him. He was a possibility to fill a gap and I had my eye on someone else (don't recall who because I fiddled the team twice after putting in my temp picks.)

07-18-2025
08:55:51 am

Rocket City Gal That last bit is brutal. Suits guys like Pog, maybe Gall, maybe Arensman or S Yates

07-18-2025
08:56:04 am

BusterSci Interesting you mention Yates. If you're Visma and you think a guy like Yates has a chance for the stage but he's also been one of the strongest protecting Jonas, do you let him burn up matches? Because Jonas's chance at the top step is gone.

07-18-2025
08:58:13 am

PasadenaK8 He sure did! Kudos to him. Coquard: "This is my last bib on this Tour and I want to make the most of this climb", he said before the start. "I can't brake with my right hand, so I can only use the front brake. I'd be a public danger if I stayed. It's for the safety of others and for my own, as it's a fracture that hasn't displaced, but there's a risk of displacement."

Rocket City Gal I read that he caught it in a musettle and broke it yesterday. I don't know if that's true or not, but he was clearly in pain with a hand that wasn't working well at the end of yesterday's stage. Uphill ITT less of a risk, but it wouldn't be safe on stage 14 for sure. There will be several screaming downhills.

SFinAus Good day, everyone07-18-2025
10:26:02 am

Trish in MA Morning all. Sorry to have missed a few stages. So catching up, lovely sunflower shirts, RCG (both designs) and happy retirement Kate. Heat wave "broke" here last night, but I ran in a race before it broke. Had my slowest time ever, but at least did not come last in my division (nearly, but not last). I think I spent half of my time standing in water being sprayed from hoses. My shoes were totally soaked. At the last water stop, I poured 3 cups over my head, one down the front of my shift and one down my back. And then traded in my empty water bottle (used for pouring water over me in between hoses) for a fresh cold one for the last quarter-mile.
