Tim in KY The stage is classified as “Flat”. But it’s another day of a late Cat 3 challenging the sprinters. The climb is 9.5 kilometers long averaging 4.2% and crests with 30 km to go. The finish is flat but there are two 90 degree turns just inside 3 km to go and several roundabouts along the final straight 2.5 km.

Rocket City Gal I figured Mads was about to exit soon. He’s been really struggling to get results. I read an interview/ article yesterday in which he indicated he’d probably be leaving the Vuelta so that they could do some testing to maybe get him feeling better for Worlds.

Rocket City Gal Re Ben Turner leaving..... he's good friends with Josh Tarling, and I think his head just hasn't been in this race. Plus, Ineos has been using him in more of a domestique roll, and I think that's messed with his confidence some.

Rocket City Gal Trim is off. We fixed the door last September. It was a multi-day affair. The roller wasn't nearly as robust as the old ones from the '70's, and it's a nice heavy solid wood door. Hopefully the handyman can figure out a better replacement solution. The garage door opener also failed yesterday. Seems to be something internal in the unit (circuit board)? We're waiting for the week's third house failure, since these things come in threes.

09-02-2026
10:09:19 am

Rocket City Gal Garage door guy is on his way and the handyman is coming later. We're usually do-it-yourselfers... but not with these. It's time to replace the big spring for the garage door anyway.... Not a do-it-yourselfer endeavor. Those things can kill ya.

Trish in MA Good morning. I'm doing nothing this morning after my long day yesterday. We ended up with 289 votes cast over 13 hours, but about 75 of those were Mail-in voters who dropped off their ballots Saturday through Tuesday. (please don't do that). We got 6 ballots that the town brought us at 8 pm. (Please, voters, don't wait that late.). We even had one voter who came in after 8:00 looking to vote.
