

Tim in KY TdF Stage 5 is a 33-kilometer ITT that starts in Caen and loops northwest through the orchards of Calvados then returns to Caen for the finish. The urban sections of the route are rather technical and well furnished.

Katie S The big news in my world today is that I got an instant message from one of my employees to say he was on the way to the hospital because he is the "secondary" for a potential liver transplant today. If the liver is not a fit for the primary recipient, it would go to Andy if it's a fit for him. This is how they do it, at least in Pennsylvania. They bring in a primary candidate and a backup. The last time he got called in was a few years ago, and the liver wasn't a fit for either candidate. Andy was supposed to do a live-donor transplant this summer, but the final tests of his body and the donor's liver (they use a portion of it, and it regenerates) showed they were not a match. It was a huge disappointment. We'll see how today goes...

09:46:51 am

Rocket City Gal Tim, I think the tiles are about 11" square. Some of these are youth tees. Upper right (and the one in the closeup) is adult large, new-to-me tie that came close to what I was going for but still needs to be tweaked a little. The bandanas are hand-sewn by a friend of mine because I was so disappointed with the small size, excessive shrinkage, and bad seams of commercial ones— she sews them around 22-23" square which is a great size.

Rocket City Gal Blue is a popular color. I have my only 2 markets of the month tomorrow and Friday— rain may be an issue. There have been a lot of rain-outs this year. At least the hip recovered pretty quickly — Monday I didn't think I'd be able to do either one. Tomorrow's market is mostly produce and baked goods with some "artisans" thrown in.... It was created in 2000 by an Italian artist for a specific project and it's been bought and sold by various companies ever since. It's essentially a fun bit of advertising! Joanna in Virginia Pain management kept me surgery free for 10 years after my car accident. I cannot tolerate pain meds, but some stronger muscle relaxers when I go into spasm would be appreciated. I am definitely a candidate for injections based on my MRI results. I am not anxious to have another surgery.
