

Tim in KY TdF Stage 11 is 157 kilometers starting and finishing in central Toulouse but consisting mostly of a clockwise loop through the surrounding countryside.

07-15-2025
01:00:52 pm

Tim in KY The route is classified as "flat" but is a bit lumpy, especially in the last third. There are four Cat 4 climbs and a Cat 3 that crests just 8 kilometers from the finish. That climb is 800 meters at 12.4% making a full-on bunch sprint less likely.

Tim in KY Kilometer zero is scheduled for 13:45 CEST. Finish is imagined either side of 17:15. Forecast is for sunshine in the toasty low-30s.

07-15-2025
01:03:11 pm

Tim in KY There were lots of fines on stage 10. Never seen fines for "Non-compliance with the article 2.3.025 by a team assistant during feeding". Turns out that's littering in the feed zone. Movi got dinged three times and Alpecin twice. Two Ineos riders got fined for sticky bottle and the Ineos and IPT team cars got fined for the same. Biggest fine went to Tudor "feeding on foot outside the feeding zone" That cost them 1000CHF!

Katie S Good morning. What the heck is ""feeding on foot outside the feeding zone" ???

07-16-2025
08:19:45 am

Rocket City Gal I thought this was going to be a sprint stage until I read about the steep final climb near the end. I don't think the sprinters can stay at the pointy end over a 12+% climb within 10 km of the finish line. It would be cool to see VdP win on his birthday, but I don't think that's going to happen either... even though a lot of people have picked him as a favorite for this stage.

Joanna in Virginia There were horses on the screen. LOL!

07-16-2025
08:41:17 am

Rocket City Gal It was an appetizer recipe that I just made as the entree since we were having the veggies too.. Simple and supposedly "French" but who knows. The only leeks I could find were not the freshest. The scallops were a frozen Aldi find and even though I thawed, drained and dried them, they just weren't quite right. I cut the leek the wrong way, before reading the recipe....

07-16-2025
08:41:50 am

Rocket City Gal It was leeks, olive oil, salt, scallops. And a couple of tbsps of white wine to deglaze the pan. First you seared the leek, then the scallops, and served the scallops atop the leeks.

07-16-2025
08:43:41 am

Rocket City Gal The squash in the ratatouille, and the bouquet garni and basil, were from the garden.

07-16-2025
08:44:52 am

Katie S The local farmer who owns the golf driving range sold me a 10-pound box of roma tomatoes at $2 a pound. Now I have to make sauce. I suspect I will freeze it - unless someone can convince me canning is better and safe.

07-16-2025
08:46:06 am

SFinAus I need a gravity assist to get to that speed - and even with that it's been rare.

07-16-2025
10:12:54 am

Trish in MA re: ASO vs. PCS - why would ASO want to spend the $$$$ on their own stats team? Just contract with PCS for a branded feed. It would have to be cheaper. Is it because they are French and no one can do stats like the French?
