Tim in KY The first 77 kilometers are basically flat. There is then an 18-kilometer-long uncategorized climb to the intermediate sprint. After the descent there is 10 km of valley road to the start of the HC finale. The Grand Colombier, as climbed this year, is 17.4 km long at an average gradient of 7.1%. There are several sections with double digit gradients.

07-14-2023
08:45:21 am

mmcally A friend of mine in Denmark said the reporting there is Jonas has not been happy with the team tactics. His interview on the world feed post race hinted at it as well.

07-14-2023
08:51:34 am

BusterSci Gotta say, if Wout isn't going to win stages he should be riding for Jonas at all times. Â Last year was an anomaly, with Wout and Vingo doing well. Serious GC teams have one objective.

07-14-2023
08:55:09 am

Tim in KY Is a gap of 1:17 worth the effort of the break?

07-14-2023
08:56:39 am

BusterSci You can play stage hunting if your GC guy is riding for a top 10. Â But if he's a legit contender for yellow--and in this race there are only two--focus is required.

07-14-2023
08:56:43 am

BusterSci For French teams and riders, yes. Â For anyone else, no.

07-14-2023
08:57:05 am

mmcally Yes, I think the multiple objectives when you have a favorite and defending champ has been an issue. Then you see yesterday the effort Benoot expended. As Jonas said, these have the potential to add up later.

07-14-2023
08:57:07 am

Katie S Good morning, enfants de la Patrie. It will be a jour de gloire for some homme atop Colombier today.

07-14-2023
08:58:00 am

mmcally Really, the entire Tour you have seen Jumbo burn matches in odd places. Their team is incredibly strong and in the end it may not matter. But if Jonas ends up losing by a little bit, there will be lots of second guessing.

07-14-2023
08:58:57 am

Tim in KY They're 15 minutes faster than the fastest right now.

07-14-2023

07-14-2023
09:00:35 am

BusterSci Just a bit over an hour into things, too.

07-14-2023
09:01:01 am

Katie S Last year Vingegaard was the hound, and Pogacar was the hare. This year, Vingo is the hare. Could have something to do with the Jumbo tactics.

07-14-2023
09:03:00 am

BusterSci On the other hand, I think you have to be very suspicious of anything a team or rider says during a race. Â Yes, sometimes honesty comes out, but I don't buy a lot of it. Â Lots of misdirection and mind games.

07-14-2023
09:04:35 am

BusterSci As the stronger team, JV could just be convincing UAE to burn matches

07-14-2023
09:05:28 am

Alaska Dave Strange is the only definition of tactics I can see. It has made the lumpy stages interesting. Right now UAE is putting lots of energy into keeping French from winning on Bastille Day. Playing with karma?

07-14-2023

07-14-2023
09:13:55 am

BusterSci Interesting how things are grouped in GC. Â Obviously Pog and Vingo at the top. Â Hindley kind of alone in third. Â But then 5 guys within 1:04 of each other around 4-5m back (4 within 22s) and then the 3 strongest Frenchman and Kuss within 57s of each other around 6-7m back. Â will be some interesting riding for minor places.
