03:27:38 pm

Tim in KY The road starts going up immediately with 750 meters of altitude gain over the first 55 kilometers. It leads to the start of the first climb, a long Cat 2 averaging 6%. The 25 km descent end at the start of the Cat 1 Mortirolo, 7.6% average with double digit ramps. The descent leads to another long stretch of uphill riding to the start of the final climb, a short steep Cat 3. From there it's a twisty 9 km descent to the finish.

05-28-2025
07:58:57 am

RCG Trish, the multiple window multi-feed wasn't my trick. We tried the multifeed but decided that our TV just isn't big enough. :-)

05-28-2025
08:01:20 am

RCG Upon trying to come to the chat room today, my antivirus software blocked it saying it was a threat. First time that's ever happened.

05-28-2025
08:01:54 am

RCG We had tornadoes around here last night, a week after the round of 15 in north Alabama (with 3 in my county). Last night the sirens went off twice. Welcome home, I guess, after mostly spectacular weather in Indiana. Race day was cool, cloudy with a little drizzle -- if we hadn't been at the track I'd have considered it a rather nice weather day just because the lower temperature was somewhat refreshing. Up in the stands, it wasn't so refreshing.

05-28-2025
08:03:42 am

RCG I'm definitely NOT a car racing fan, but I married a guy who grew up in Indy and it's always tied in with lots of family time with the in-laws. The race is an obligation (more or less; there are years my ticket went to someone else), but the family time is very nice.

05-28-2025
08:04:54 am

RCG There is a bike-doping equivalent in Indy car racing -- unapproved vehicle modifications and not meeting specifications. The Penske cars got moved to the back of the field because their modifications were discovered pre-race. Post-race inspections showed unapproved modifications and failure to meet specifications for cars of three of the top 12 finishers including the guy who finished 2nd. It was a weird race that started under a yellow caution flag because one guy spun out and crashed during one of the pace car laps before the race had even officially started; the penalized guys were moved to the rear of the finishers in order, meaning that they officially finished before the guy who didn't even technically start. They also received fines, suspensions, and forfeiture of prize money and championship points. So I guess there are cheaters in every sport...

05-28-2025
08:11:38 am

RCG *(should have rad, "they officially finished AFTER the guy who didn't even technically start).

05-28-2025
08:12:58 am

RCG Here is what his team is saying about Roglic: He didn't even ride on the rest day. He could barely push 60 watts on the rollers. His three crashes resulted in re-injuring the shoulder that was injured last year, large wounds full of debris, and he also hit his quadriceps muscle quite hard.

05-28-2025
08:17:13 am

bikerabe break is at 3 min.

05-28-2025
08:17:47 am

RCG Tarling sustained "bone and soft tissue injuries to his lower back"

05-28-2025
08:18:28 am

RCG Martinelli, the guy who slid down into the ravine, escaped serious injury. Miraculously after evaluation he was found to have cuts/abrasions to his chin and rear end. I heard that he was unconscious for a bit so there's undoubtedly an element of concussion there as well. But "nothing serious."
