10-04-2020
07:02:30

mmcally Tim, you will eventually come around and join us on the duckside. But in all seriousness, this continues the UCIs own bad look. They pulled this same stunt at the Tour with Doom and Martin. They did this with sock heights a few years back. They have many bigger issues that need to be addressed, yet go after EF's new jersey? They should be thanking them for bringing more attention to the sport. But I'm sure EF is going to make a lot of money once Rapha releases these jerseys for sale. All I see online is people asking how to get one. Me included. The louder the better for me when riding on the roads.

10-04-2020

10-04-2020

10-04-2020
09:26:29

BusterSci Today we may learn an answer to a big question. Â Was Peto's subpar Tour performance due to focusing more on the Giro?

10-04-2020
09:27:28

Tim in KY This stage is certainly made for Sagan and Matthews.Â UAE seems to think Gaviria, too.

10-04-2020

10-04-2020
09:30:08

SFinAus Good day all.Â Just got through the comments - I thought I read an EF tweet that they were asked or required by race organizers to change kit.Â I might have I mis-read though.Â Just got back from La Crosse/Eau Claire WI area (with excursion to Red Wing, MN) - fall color off to a good start but <50%.

10-04-2020
09:30:23

BusterSci If I'm not mistaken, the Redwing-Lacrosse area is more heavily oak, which goes yellow to brown, instead of maple where you get the flame colors. Â Up over the ridge along the north shore of Superior looks like a firestorm in the fall-- which may be traumatic for our Cali Nuts.

10-04-2020
09:32:50

Charlie in Tenn I think they were asked to change it. I also think the question is did they then apply for the actual change. Vaughters says they did apply, the UCI says they did not. UCI at it's best.

10-04-2020
09:32:51

Katie S sigh, Buster, so true. At least the foliage flames you speak of are unaccompanied by smoke.

10-04-2020
