

Tim in KY TdF Stage 17 is 168 kilometers south through the Alps from the ski resort Saint-Gervais Mont Blanc to the often-used finish on the runway of the altiport above Courchevel.

Tim in KY The route starts slightly uphill and there isn't any really flat road for the entire length. Even the runway is ridden in the uphill direction. The stage includes two Cat1s, a Cat 2 and the HC Col de la Loze. That climb crests at the highest altitude of this year's Tour, 2,304 meters. The climb is almost 30 kilometers long and averages 6%. But that average includes some shallow, flat and downhill sections. The last 7 km are quite steep with some double-digit gradient sections. This climb has only been used one before, in 2020, because the road wasn't paved until 2019. The final climb up the runway is 11% with a ramp of 18% near the finish line at the altiport.

Katie S I am one of the few who really enjoy Phil and Bob, and I am glad that CVV has the moto gig. He's a natural. I also agree the the studio crew is doing a good job. Early in the race, Bewley was pretty stiff and Bookwalter a bit less so. I thought Burmeister did a good job of getting them to yammer. And now all three seem like they've hit their stride as a trio. I just wonder what the auditions were like.

07-19-2023
09:15:17 am

mmcally It's a respectable argument. You hear it a lot with Lee Corso and Dick Vitale as well. I remember from my MLB days when some said it about Harry Caray. In Phoenix Al Mccoy just retired at the age of 90 from Suns broadcasts. It's a delicate balance of respecting the past, holding on to it as long as you can and bringing in the new fresh voice. 07-19-2023

07-19-2023
10:10:08 am

BusterSci So at 10k to go they hit 2000m, with 300m additional climbing after that. Â Many guys struggled on the highest peaks. Â Valverde could never do it. Â Nibali wasn't great. Â Columbians have generally done well (go figure.) Carapaz had to be eyeing this stage--he was born and raised at 2900 meters.

07-19-2023
10:31:01 am

BusterSci Said he hates the Tour, and if you ask anybody who has ridden 10 they'd say the same.

07-19-2023
10:31:07 am

 BusterSci He was one that seemed to ride with much joy early in his career. Â Sad to see it change. 07-19-2023 10:32:06 am

 Joanna in Virginia Well, he was in a spot of bother that one year, and as I recall, it was unjustified. So, I could understand that sentiment. 07-19-2023 10:32:21 am

 Joanna in Virginia Oh, a ski jump. Shame Rug isn't here. 07-19-2023 10:32:39 am

 Mikey Do you think he was hinting at not getting a bit more attention as he was in his last tour? No good goodbye? 07-19-2023 10:32:45 am

 Katie S Oh, hey, there's a ski... 07-19-2023 10:32:47 am

 Joanna in Virginia HORSES! 07-19-2023 10:33:47 am

 BusterSci Hadn't thought of that, Mikey. Â Don't know if it was a hint or maybe an underlying grudge with Cav. 07-19-2023 10:33:59 am

 Mikey Not missing the Paramount + 07-19-2023 10:34:31 am

 Katie S Sagan was an acquired taste for me, but once he wormed (Hulked?) his way into my cycling fan's heart, he's been there for good. So, yes, I hope he finds renewed enthusiasm in mountain biking or gravel or just himself. 07-19-2023 10:35:41 am

 Mikey I feel the same way Katie 07-19-2023 10:36:17 am

 Mikey How about a final day win? 07-19-2023 10:37:20 am

 Joanna in Virginia And now for something completely different. Since hubby is gone so often, he acquired a Ring motion light and camera for our deck sliding door. It is not overly sensitive to the neighbor's dog or kids, but a freaking spider loves to build a web on it every few weeks. Invariably, the web gets moving in the breeze and the notifications start in the wee hours of the morning. This morning, the tone went off over 80 times and worked into a dream, causing me panic, and waking me up. I threw on my robe, trudged downstairs at 4am, and destroyed the web. Never happens when hubby is home, of course, he would have been getting the notifications at 2am, so I'll stop complaining. LOL!

07-19-2023
10:40:24 am

 BusterSci Did the web say "Some Horse"

07-19-2023
